Hi Chair Repass,

Yes, it's me again. I'm not going away, and I see that you've been repeatedly opening my emails. Your continued silence regarding both my request for the 29-page internal memo documenting Ben Meers' workplace abuse and my substantive criminal allegations against him forces a binary choice: accountability or complicity.

The criminal evidence I have compiled will inevitably become public record. The only question is whether KDP leadership demonstrates institutional integrity beforehand, or whether your silence becomes part of the story.

Here's what happens when I file criminal charges—something prosecutors have already recommended based on my evidence:

National media attention: A former Democratic Party executive director facing felony charges across eight jurisdictions, as well as a potential federal indictment for possessing non-consensual intimate images, will generate significant coverage.

Discovery process: Criminal proceedings will likely subpoena the 29-page memo you refuse to release, along with any communications about Mr. Meers' conduct both in this case and in the case of the memo.

Congressional/political exposure: Opposition research will inevitably tie this to broader questions about Democratic Party institutional culture and accountability.

Witness testimony: The "former Kansas Democratic Party staff" referenced in my criminal complaint will likely be called to testify publicly about the documented pattern of abuse.

What this means for the Party:

- Every Democratic candidate in Kansas will face questions about KDP's handling of workplace abuse.
- National party leadership will face questions about vetting and accountability processes.

The contrast between your silence and the immediate, responsible response from DS Political will highlight institutional dysfunction.

The Simple Resolution Path

You have an incredibly easy and low-effort opportunity to demonstrate that Democratic values aren't just campaign rhetoric:

- Publicly acknowledge that the internal memo documented concerning workplace behavior.
- State clearly that such conduct is incompatible with Party values.
- Confirm that Mr. Meers' departure was related to these documented concerns.
- Release the memo with appropriate redactions for privacy.

This costs you nothing and gains you everything—you become the party that holds its own accountable, rather than the party that covers up for abusers. Waiting to do this until after I file criminal complaints will not prevent your inclusion in any civil matters we pursue against Mr. Meers on top of the criminal investigation.

The Cover-Up Narrative

Your silence has already created a narrative problem, especially given the extensive statewide coverage of the prior scandal from 2022–23. When this becomes public, the story will not just be “Democratic operative charged with sex crimes.” It will be:

“Kansas Democratic Party enabled a sexual predator who repeatedly engaged in non-consensual surveillance of female staffers and potential commercial distribution of non-consensual porn while cynically campaigning on a Protect Women platform.”

That narrative damages every Democratic candidate and official in Kansas. It reinforces every criticism about institutional protection of powerful white men who abuse their power—rendering impotent any moral criticism your party would have towards President Trump. It hands opposition researchers a ready-made attack line about Democratic hypocrisy on accountability.

Timeline for Decision

You have until 5:00 PM CT on May 26, 2025—yes, Memorial Day, but given your complete disregard for victims of Mr. Meers' abuse, holiday courtesy is no longer a consideration.

After that deadline:

- Criminal complaints proceed to eight jurisdictions as recommended by prosecutors who have reviewed the evidence.
- All documentation, including records of KDP's non-response, becomes part of public court filings.
- Media inquiries will include questions about institutional cover-up.
- The 29-page memo becomes subject to criminal discovery regardless of your preferences.

The Political Reality

Prosecutors have already reviewed my evidence and recommended filing charges. Mr. Meers is already functionally radioactive—DS Political responded within hours of learning about prosecutorial interest. He cannot and will not hold meaningful Democratic positions again, and ideally, will be permanently and publicly disavowed from the party. Additionally, your calculus here to ignore me likely did not include any background research on who I am or who within the greater Democratic Party I am connected to.

Your choice is simple:

Demonstrate accountability and move forward, or

Tie the entire Kansas Democratic Party to his defense through your silence.

One protects the institution and advances Democratic values. The other ensures that every Kansas Democrat running in 2026 will be asked why their party covered up for an alleged sex criminal.

Final Consideration

Prosecutors have already reviewed the evidence and recommended charges—this is not a theoretical threat but an imminent legal reality. I am not seeking money, publicity, or political gain. I am seeking accountability for serious criminal conduct, an end to institutional protection of abusers, and for the Democratic Party to actually embody the values it often self-righteously lords over others.

You can provide that accountability voluntarily and maintain some control over the narrative, or you can have it imposed through criminal proceedings where you have no control over timing, framing, or media coverage.

The choice, and the responsibility for its consequences, rest entirely with you.
